Building social innovation at urban level

18th NOVEMBER 2014
02.30 pm/06.30 pm
@TOOLBOX COWORKING
Via A. Da Montefeltro 2- Torino

The City of Turin is part of the European Project MyGeneration@Work. It involves 12 different European cities. Their mission is contributing to a new economy by bridging the gap between young people, the education system and the labour market.

In the context of this initiative, the City of Turin is organizing an international meeting, the 18th of November 2014, with the proposal of animating the discussion around innovative socio-economic drivers and models for a sustainable economic growth of our cities, in order to share visions and experiences of successful social innovation practices.

The final aim is stimulating ideas and the debate around priorities and relevant actions for cities, in order to foster Social Innovation at urban level. These priorities will be part of the future social agenda that will be presented to the secretary of the European program Urbact.
